Final Expense Planning

Are your funds protected?
Consider This . . .

Most significant events in our lives require planning; you rarely just let them happen.
Funerals Require Planning, Too!

- Like other major life events, funerals require planning.

- Today, prearranging and prefunding one’s own funeral is not uncommon. Of all Americans aged 50+ years, it is estimated that:
  - 34% have preplanned their own funeral.*
  - 24% have prepaid at least a portion of funeral or burial expenses.*

* AARP Funeral and Burial Planners Survey (2007).
Small Steps, Big Impact

You don’t have to decide everything all at once!

Set aside funds today. If and when you’re ready to plan out the details, you can meet with the funeral home of your choice to make arrangements.
In the past, there have been four common ways to pay for a funeral:

1. Life Insurance:
   These are funds intended to be left to your family and may not be immediately available.

2. Personal Savings:
   These are funds for day-to-day living. In the event of a lengthy illness, they may have eroded significantly.

3. Credit card or loan:
   This approach leaves heirs in debt.

4. Family and friends:
   Borrowing from family and friends can be embarrassing as well as a financial strain to repay.

Fortunately, there’s a better option...
Funeral Expense Trust

A designated, prefunded plan that combines the financial stability of insurance with the security of a trust.

Are Your Funds Protected?

- Among people turning 65 today, 69 percent will need some form of long-term care.*
- The national average cost of long term care is $68,255-76,460/year
  - Annual growth of 4% over the last five years
- Many people who need long-term care will need to qualify for Medicaid at some point
  - This may require reducing your countable assets by paying the nursing home, making allowable purchases, or exempting assets from consideration
- Putting your funds into a trust for funeral expenses may exempt that money from Medicaid consideration

How a Funeral Trust Works

1. Preplanning Funds
   - Life Insurance Policy
   - Use money from Savings, 1035 Exchanges, etc.

2. Death benefit GROWS!
   - Irrevocable Funeral Trust
   - Protected Funds earn interest (tax-free) until time of need

3. Funeral provider paid within 48 hours

4. Excess Funds Paid to Estate
   - Funds avoid probate costs and delays; expenses covered immediately
